Most Americans want to eat healthier but need support, guidance and role-modeling from leaders in their workplaces and communities. By changing food policies at the organizational level, we will drive a change in demand, leading to more access to affordable healthy options for everyone! Transforming the food environment within an organization can be challenging, which is why the American Heart Association created the Healthy Workplace Food and Beverage Toolkit. The toolkit provides workplaces with practical guidance to follow when selecting foods and beverages for meetings, events and office consumption.
